THE SPIRITS DEMONSTRATE ONE MESSAGE AT THE CONVENTION

WAS FROM HENRY J. NEWTON. Others That Seemed to Hit the Mark-One Woman Who Declared That Hers Was a Bad Miss-An Artist Accused of Being a Caricaturist Is Moved to Make a Speech. Mrs. May Pepper of Boston enlivened the piritualist convention, which is in session in Lorio Hall, by a number of communications from spirits yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Pepper is a robust woman with auburn hair and a full, strong voice of great dramatio possibilities. Mrs. Pepper began by saying that she hoped she would be able to bring intelligible measages from the other world to many of those present. She hoped that too much would not be expected of her and that any one who had any inkling that the message she brought was for him or her, no matter how vague it might seem, would speak up and acknowl-

"If only I say enough to let you understand what is meant, please speak up." she said. "Now I want to say that Henry J. Newton is here.

The late Mr. Newton was a prominent Spiritualist and his widow is an ardent believer in the cult. She was once quite wellto-do, but now has not a great deal of the goods of this world left, so it was said at the

"He says to you, madam," the medium went on, turning to Mrs. Newton who sat on the platform, "that he is glad that you twined the flowers about the picture. May I ask whether you have recently twined flowers about a picture?"

"I have," said Mrs. Newton "The next spirit," said Mrs. Pepper, "is a lady and gentleman. They do not seem to belong together, but seem to have a common Interest. They seem to have an interest in the lady over there. Will you tell me, madam, whether you have any glasses? Do you wear glasses or a lorgnette?"

"I do," said the lady. Mrs. Pepper seemed to go into a trance Then she began to speak in low, solemn tones. "I am William Hawkins," she announced, "I seem to be in the relation of a husband to the lady to whom you have spoken. The lady with me is your sister-in-law. She left her lorgnette to you in her will. On Monday last you broke it, did you not?"

The woman who was pointed out as the one visited by the spirits seemed to be very much affected. She said that it was all true. "Now." said the medium, "there comes to me a young spirit, not the spirit of a young man, but a young spirit. It says to the lady before me with three red roses in her hat before me with three red roses in her hat that he did not think that voyage would be her last. Does that mean anything to you? Yes? And I get the name William Ridgely. Is that right? Yes? Thank you!"

"Now," continued the medium, "a spirit stands over the lady in deep black in the second row, He asks me to say that James Holmes is here. He tells you, madam, not to worry. They cannot take from you the things which are yours.

"That's right," cried the lady in deep black,
"that's right. They're doing their best to rob me. They robbed James, too, when he was in this life!"

"The spirit," continued the medium, "also advises you not to move yet awhile."

She then announced that John Somerset had a message for some one on the platform.
She pointed out the Ray. Mr. Austin, who was until recently a Methodist minister, as the recipient of the message. Mr. Austin, though he has a long brown beard, is known in the convention as the Spiritualistic infant because of his recent conversion.

A feature of yesterday afternoon's meeting was a flerie attack upon the caricaturists, who had filled some of the afternoon papers with uncomplimentary pictures of the Spiritualists. All the denunciations were directed at a tall, lean young man who sat under the platform with a big piece of bristol board on his knee. At last he rose.

"I desire to say, he said solemnly, "that the spirits who have conveved to you the information that I am a caricaturist are away off. I have made pictures in Mr. Moody's meetings and have never been insulted by being called a caricaturist.

A number of mediums came down from the platform and soothed the young man and told him that it was all a mistake, that he was not the man; and gave him their was not the man; and gave him their in Spiritualist meetings wearied him greatly. He wanted the time to come, he said, when there would be no more shenanigan in the cult.

At the night session there was a debate on the immortality of the soul between Henry Frank and William L. Lockwood. There was very little time left for the spirit messages which were given by a medium named "ira" from Brooklyn. His most startling information came from a man who said that 'Madam was false to the vows that he took from her on his death bed," and he recited a poem which ended:

'For Madam is telestory.

For Madam is false to me, false to me, false to me!" Then he asked a woman with pink roses in her hat if she knew what he was talking about, and she said with much indignation that she did not and didn't want to.

The convention continues to-day.

JUDGE SORRY FOR THE HUSBAND. He's a Likely Young Fellow and She Was Ar-

A rather faded and carelessly drawed woman, who said she was Mary Colton of 1298 Crane in Jefferson Market police court yesterday morning charged with soliciting. She had been arrested at 2 o'clock in the morning by Detectives Bessant and Martineau of the Tenderloin police station. They swore that she had been seen accosting men in Sixth avenue. She maintained that she was a respectable married woman. Her husband, she said, was in court to speak for her. The husband, a well-dressed young fellow, with rather more character in his face than is usually possessed by the men who follow streetwalkers to court to pay their fines, was brought forward to testify. He said that he had been married to the defendant in March, 1960, by the Rev. Dr. Houghton at the Little Church Around the Corner.

"I'm a civil engineer," he said. "No, I have never been employed, except to care for some business for my father. He makes me an allowance. I am 24 years old and my wife is 23."

"Does your wife walk in Sixth avenue at 2 o'clock in the morning with your approval?"

"We were sitting in the Royal Gurdens, eating and drinking. She heard the noise of a row outside and ran out. She had a right to go out if she wanted to." He said his particular to go out if she wanted to. "He said his particular to the said howing broad and Phobbe A. Hanaford. Sixth avenue. She maintained that she was

LEGISLATIVE ACT DID NOT TOUCH RIPARIAN RIGHTS.

Only by Indirection Can the Act Be Considered Unconstitutional-Hue and Cry About "Robbery" of the School Fund. J. Du Pratt White, the Secretary to the Palisades Park Commission, and S. Wood McClave, member of the New Jersey Palisades Commission of 1889, promptly side with Riparian Commissioner Fisk in his argument with Commissioner Payne regarding the construction of the Legislative act for the preservation of the Palisades. The expression of the opinions of these two Commissioners, as set forth in THE SUN yesterday, has aroused a lively interest in the question. The feeling in New Jersey, outside of Hudson County, that the school fund has been "robbed" of $1,200,000 or so, is by no means the least debated part of the sub-

Commissioner McClave vesterday sent to THE SUN the following communication: TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN-Sir: The article

To the Editor of the Sun—Sir. The article in to-day's Sun, entitled "Palisade Park in Danger," is a false alarm, for which Secretary Payne of the New Jersey Riparian Board, apparently, is responsible.

Riparian Commissioner Fisk's argument is sound in that the Legislature of New Jersey gave the Palisades Commissioners the right to condemn property from high-water mark to the top of the cliffs, and does not affect riparian rights.

The opponents to the preservation of the Palisades have continually brought forth the argument as to the great value of these rights and the loss to the schools if given away.

rights and the loss to the schools if given away.

I ask them, in all fairness, to look up the records from time immemorial, and they will be surprised to find how little money the schools have received from the sale of these rights, and yet they have always been "for sale." This is the best argument as to their value. Again, the opposition seem to forget that New Jersey, in 1835, ceded these riparian rights to the United States Government on condition that it take the lands on top of the Palisades in addition to their base for a military park, and I believe this law has never been repealed. The friends of the Palisades can rest assured that they are saved the moment Gov. Odell signs the bill now before him. Respectfully, S. Wood McClave.

Member of the New Jersey Palisades Commission of 1899.

May 2, 1911.

J. Du Pratt White, secretary to the Palisades Park Commissioners, said yesterday that the act of the New Jersey Legislature would stand any test as to alleged conflict with the Constitution of the State or with the School show Park commissioners, said vestature would stand any test as to alleged conflict with the Constitution of the State or with the School Fund law concerning riparian rights. He said the riparian question did not enter into the case at all, as only the "upland," from high-water mark up to the cliffs was covered by the statute. He said further:

"There can be no legal contest of a proposition like that. Indeed, most of the property owners have come forward in the fairest sort of way to cooperate with the commission. There must always be some few persons dissatisfied, and we have tried to deal with these as courteously as possible. I don't expect a conflict and I don't wish to seem to expect it. The park scheme is law. The law is Constitutional. And as for any clash with the New Jersey law on Fiparian lands, Mr. Payne of that State's Riparian Commission understands as well as we do that the riparian lands haven't entered into the question.

rayne of that suces hiparian consistent understands as well as we do that the riparian lands haven't entered into the question. New Jersey can't buy those lands because the courts hold that under-water lands belong to the State aiready.

Two or three New Jersey lawyers got their heads together yesterday and agreed with Commissioner Payne in his view that the act of the New Jersey Legislature contemplated the acquirement of riparian rights as well as the property from high water mark to the top of the cliffs. It is on this ground of inference that they denounce the act as unconstitutional. One of these lawyers said:

"Even if the act does not make the gift, specifically, it is still open to the criticism that it does it by indirection. The alienation of the land destroys the value of the riparian lands; and so, for all the benefit the State School Fund can ever derive from their sale or lesse, they might as well have been given outright to the Interstate Commission.

"No one else would want them. Only to

No one else would want them. Only to the Interstate Commission can they be useful. The gift of the adjacent upland is therefore as good as an out-and-out gift of the water rights beyond. That is accomplishing by indirection what cannot be done directly, and is a kind of a transaction that has frequently been held to be illegal by the New Jersey courts."

with Mrs. Le Moyne in the role that America has seen so finely acted by Charlotte Cushman, Ristort, Ellen Terry, Janauschek and Helena Modjeska. Mrs. Le Moyne's great ability as an elocutionist would make such an undertaking surely interesting and she might give a performance to rank with the best. She will not make the trial anyway until late in the season, as she has a new play by F. Marion Crawford, as already announced.
